Collection Information

Abstract : Abby Kelley and Stephen F. Foster, notable in the anti-slavery movement in the 1830s-1860s, married in 1845. A daughter, Alla Foster, was born in 1847. Both remained very active in the anti-slavery movements, and later in other social concerns of the time, especially women's rights. The collection is comprised of letters written to Abby from Stephen, tax records and books. Letters could be interrupted as a "courtship through the mail". Letters also discuss their various meetings around the country, when they can meet up. Also included in collection are publications dealing with Anti-Slavery, Women's Rights, Colleges and a collection of serials dealing with social issues.

Finding Aid : Finding Aid in print form is available in the Repository.

Preferred Citation : Worcester Historical Museum, Worcester, Massachusetts.

Provenance : Found in archives.

MARC Access : Collection is cataloged in MARC under the following subject headings (lcsh, aat, tgm, gmgcp)

Historical/Biographical Notes

Abby Kelley (1811-1887) was born in Pelham, Massachusetts, of Irish-Quaker parentage. The family moved to Worcester shortly after her birth, where she was educated in the public schools, and later attended the Friends School in Providence, R.I. She taught school for several years, abandoning the profession in 1837 to devote her life to the Anti-Slavery Movement.

Stephen S. Foster (1809-1881) was born in Canterbury, N.H., son of Colonel Asa Foster. He was a graduate of Dartmouth College and entered Union Theological Seminary in New York with the intention of becoming a Congregational minister. His interest in the Anti-Slavery movement led him into conflict with seminary authorities, and he left after his first year to devote his life to the Anti-Slavery Movement, and later the Women's Rights and Temperance Movements.

Abby Kelley and Stephen Foster met during their travels for the anti-slavery cause, and were married in a Quaker ceremony at New Brighton, Penn., December 21, 1845. A daughter, Alla, was born in 1847.

In 1847 Abby and Stephen purchased a farm in the Tatnuck section of Worcester, which they farmed successfully despite frequent absences by both for anti-slavery activities. The farm became a prominent station on the underground railway for slaves fleeing the south for Canada and freedom.

Both Stephen and Abby Kelley Foster were active in the abolitionist movement, traveling and speaking throughout the northeastern part of the United States. Both were also active in other great social issues of the time, notably temperance and women's rights, and corresponded regularly with other social activists, notably William Lloyd Garrison, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Lucy Stone, and many others.

Stephen died September 8, 1881. Abby Kelley Foster died January 14, 1887. Their lives made a significant impact on the nation's conscience.

Scope and Content

Abby Kelley and Stephen F. Foster, notable in the anti-slavery movement in the 1830s-1860s, married in 1845. A daughter, Alla Foster, was born in 1847. Both remained very active in the anti-slavery movements, and later in other social concerns of the time, especially women's rights.

The collection is comprised of letters written to Abby from Stephen, tax records and books. Letters could be interrupted as a "courtship through the mail". The letters are written to Abby Kelley from Stephen Foster beginning in 1842 and continuing until 1849. Letters also discuss their various meetings around the country, when they can meet up. Letter dated April 7, 1847 details the purchase of a house in Worcester that Stephen calls "Cook's place." This could possibly be Liberty Farm on Mower Street. Also included in collection are publications dealing with Anti-Slavery, Women's Rights, Colleges and a collection of serials dealing with social issues.
